HARBOR LIGHTS.

iles, the Entrance to New York Bay Is

The entrance to New York harbor is in minated at night like a city street, s each of the spar buoys along the Gedchannel carries an electric light. current for these lights, as well as is furnished from a generating station at Sandy Hock Part of the lights are surabled with a continuous current at (5) volts by means of nearly two miles f cable, consisting of a single conducter of seven stranded copper wires of No. 18 gange, covered with an insulaar and protected by a double armor of thelwire. The buoys along the Gedney hunclare furnished with an alternating current at 1,000 volts, probably the free instance in which such a current ing team used for this purpose.

to the manufacture of the six miles of cable for these lights the use of iron , an armor had to be discarded, as with a the effects of self induction were too Act anced. Accordingly the armor empicted is No. 18 gauge hard drawn copper viic, the conductor consisting of erven stranded copper wires of similar gauge. Gatta percha is the insulator. The conversion of the alternating current from 1,000 volts in the primary current to 100 volts for the lamp circuit is effeeted in a small transformer of 600 watts capacity fitted inside the head of the wooden buoy. Each is mounted in a strong water tight case, which is filled with heavy oil as an additional insulation. The lamps are of 100 caudle power each, and are set at the top of the buoy. They are protected by heavy bell glass globes, and are about five inches n diameter. The buoys to which these lamps are fixed are large spars from 60 to 70 feet long, each anchored to the bottom by a hollow cast iron block shaped like a mushroom and weighing about 5.000 pounds.

COSTLY THEATRICALS.

Playgoers growl at the price of sents RENO, NEVADA. in the theater today, but let them read what was charged in Philadelphia at one time, as told in "Shakespeare's Heroines on the Stage," and then rest content. The story is told in these words in the book:

"In 1769, at Annapolis, 'The Merchant of Venice' was produced by the New American company, with Mrs. Osborne, the beavy tragedy actress, as the heroine. The curtain rang up at 6 p. up. in the 'rew' playhouse. Gentlemen who desired to pay but 5s, sat perforce in the pit or upper boxes; those who could afford 7s. 6d. chose the more fashionable lower boxes. Some of the cheaper seats were not easy of access, if we may judge by this advertisement in the paper of the day, 'Upper boxes are now preparing, the passage to which must be from the stage; it is therefore hoped such gentlemen and ladies as choose to fix on these seats will come before the play begins, as it is not possible they can be admitted after the curtain is drawn up. ' "As for the cost of going to the theater in the New York playhouse at this time, that ran lower; gallery seats there sold for 2s. each, pit seats for 4s. and the boxes, of which there were ton, for 5s. These prices, however, were apparently very moderate (whether they were New York shillings or sterling shillings) compared with the prices at the Philadelphia theater in 1780, when $15 was charged for the admission of a child, $20 for a gallery seat, $80 for admission to the pit, and $40 for a box; but these latter prices, it may be added, were in continental money!'
